

HERO, HOME, GETS "WIRE" HE'S HURT

Another Boy Signs for Telegram Telling He Was Killed

77 FROM HERE ON LIST War Department Sends Out More Corrections in Previously Reported Casualties

Another Philadelphia hero has come home in time to receive with his own hands the War Department telegram informing his family that he had been severely wounded.

Mark Singleton is the soldier, and he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Singleton, 1607 South Second street.

He limped around the house today, his arm temporarily paralyzed and one leg badly torn. He was wounded in six places by shrapnel, and gassed to boot, on July 18 at Chateau-Thierry.

About the fight in which he was wounded he would tell little, except to praise the way in which the American soldiers drove the Germans back, undaunted by the storm of machine gun bullets and shells they had to face.

Singleton enlisted November 20, 1917, and was assigned to Company F, Motor Supply Train. He sailed for France June 10, this year, after training at Fort Slocum and at Jacksonville, Fla.

He received notice of his own death. A West Philadelphia soldier who returned home a month ago, severely wounded, arrived in Philadelphia today, a telegram informing his parents of his death in action.

Seventy-seven names of soldiers from Philadelphia and vicinity appear in the honor roll for today. One was killed in action, another died of wounds, two air-planes accidents and twenty-four were wounded severely, twenty-seven wounded, degree undetermined, sixteen slightly. One man is missing.

The following Philadelphia names are named in a long list of corrections given out by the War Department today: Private Bolesley Umklak, 2547 Salmon street, previously reported missing, has been located in a base hospital suffering from wounds.

Private Francis Kieschick, 322 Cato street; Domenico Petrosino, 1943 Cayuga street; Andrew Proc, 1620 Junonia street, previously reported missing, have been located in base hospitals suffering from influenza.

The following, previously reported missing, have returned to their families. They were separated for a few days during the hard fighting in the Argonne forest, but finally found their own "outfits."

Private Harry Apothaker, 2016 South Tenth street; Charles Brenner, 926 North Second street; Joseph Canio, 2129 West Clearford street; William T. Crawford, 1922 North Hancock street; Thomas H. Easton, 2798 North Boudin street; Robert C. Erisman, 550 Race street; Matthew J. Fitzpatrick, 1418 Marston street; Thomas Fox, 3017 North Fifth street; James G. Grenner, 2546 Waterloo street; James Harding, 605 North Eleventh street; James F. Hogan, 1808 West Huntingdon street, and Walter F. Kent, 3174 Cedar street.

SKETCHES OF THE HEROES Corporal William L. Shaw enlisted July 1917, trained at Gettysburg and Charlotte, N. C., and sailed for France last April. He has been in every drive made by American troops. In September he was severely wounded in an action on the Argonne front. He was in the line during the famous battle of the Argonne, and he was in the line during the famous battle of the Argonne.

On October 2 he was gassed twice during the bitter fighting in the Argonne forest. He was in the trenches for nine consecutive days half-clothed and without sleep or hot food. Yesterday his mother received a letter telling of his recovery in a base hospital. The letter followed the official telegram by three days. Shaw was a salesman by profession and lived at 317 Linden street, Camden.

Private Walter L. Paul, twenty-nine years old, of 703 Broadway, Camden, was gassed and wounded during the famous fighting in the Argonne forest on October 11. He was drafted September 21, 1917, being one of the first Camden men to be called. He was trained at Camp Dix and sailed for France October 11. He was in the line during the famous counter-attack which stopped the German drive on Paris, and he arrived at his home in Philadelphia on a ten-day's leave of absence to spend the holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Grenner, of 428 East Mt. Airy avenue.

A brother, Private Jacques Fischer, seventeen years old, who enlisted the day Congress declared war on Germany, was killed the same day on which Lieutenant Fischer was wounded. The two were in the same unit, Company K, 109th Infantry. The first news of the death of his brother came to the mother of the boy about three weeks afterward, as he lay in a base hospital in a cablegram from his parents.

Lieutenant Fischer was invalided home on Thanksgiving Day, and sent from Hampton Roads, Virginia, where he landed to the base hospital at Lakeside, N. J., for treatment. His parents were not informed of his arrival in this country until last Saturday.

Lieutenant Fischer, who is twenty-six years old, was commissioned at Camp Hancock as a second lieutenant. He had been a member of the old First Regiment, N. G. E., for ten years, having served with that organization on the Mexican border. After his arrival overseas he was promoted to first lieutenant, which rank he held when wounded.

About noon on July 16, Lieutenant Fischer led his platoon in an attack on a German position. They were crawling along hunting for cover when they were hit by machine gun fire. He, of Philadelphia, and wounding Lieutenant Fischer and Lieutenant McGuire, of Scranton, and a number of his men.

Lieutenant Fischer has a sister, Miss Clara Fischer, who is in France as a member of the American Nurses Corps. She is stationed at Tours. The lieutenant is a shell-shocked man, and is dropping in upon her for a three-day visit. The sister nurse did not know of her brother's injuries until she learned them from his own lips.

Lieutenant Fischer says the French soldiers were amazed at first to see this American sharpshooter pick their individual man off in the thick of the battle. The French fired only at masses, and not taking their lesson from the Americans, they also learned the new art of "get your man."

Private Joseph Gallagher, Company H, 16th Infantry, wounded in action, is the youngest of the five sons of Mrs. Sarah Gallagher, 1704 North Bodine street, who are serving their country. All five of them are in France.

Private Joseph Gallagher wrote his mother on November 29 that he was feeling so much better he hoped soon to be discharged from the hospital or at least sent back to the United States. He enlisted in the regular army in July, 1917, and went overseas last May.

The five soldier brothers are: Corporal James Gallagher, Private Cornelius Gallagher, Private John Gallagher, Private William Gallagher and Private Joseph Gallagher. Private Cornelius Gallagher was seriously wounded in action on November 1. He is rapidly recovering from his wounds in a hospital in France.

Private Ralph De Marco, Company B, 15th Infantry, was wounded on the band by a piece of shell on October 10. Official notice that he had been hurt was received by his father, Joseph De Marco, 1012 Carpenter street. A letter from him brought the news that the wound was not serious. De Marco was a photographer when he entered the service.

May 24, 1918. After training at Camp Meade, he went overseas last July. Two of his brothers also served in the war. Fred De Marco is a member of Battery E, Seventy-seventh Field Artillery, now in France, and George De Marco has just been relieved from further service in the navy.

Private Leonard Bee, Company D, 315th Infantry, was wounded in action on October 28. He is twenty-three years old and was drafted on September 27, 1917. He lived at 2405 North 27th street.

Private Edward L. Fox, Company A, 215th Infantry, was wounded on September 28, but had been discharged from the hospital on October 10. He is twenty-five years old and was drafted on January 3, 1918. He lived with his brother, James, at 1940 East Russell street.

Private Clarence Guenther, officially named as wounded, made the most miraculous recovery ever reported by the War Department. The Government telegram received by his parents states that he had been injured on September 28, but had been discharged from the hospital as cured on the very next day. In his last letter, dated November 30, he made no mention of having been wounded, but vividly described the "big drive" that sent the Germans reeling from the Argonne Forest and really turned the tide of war in favor of the Allies.

"For five days and nights we kept after Heintz," said Private Guenther. "We dug in at night, slept a few hours and then went out in the morning. The Germans broke and we chased them for miles. After that my unit, the 148th Infantry, was transferred to Flanders and Brigadier General Nighthelm, 159 Ridge avenue, Upper Roxborough, on whose farm he worked before he enlisted. He was wounded in four places by shrapnel and is one of the fifteen men of his company who survived the fighting in wounded during the drive that pierced the famous Kriemhilde-Stellung line during the middle of October. He slowly recovering at a base hospital near St. Nazaire, France. He has a machine-gun bullet in his hip and a fragment of shrapnel broke his pelvis bone, but he will be right as a trivet in five or six weeks.

Praising the bravery of the rank and file in a letter to his father, Alfred C. Watson, 5222 Wayne avenue, Germantown, Lieutenant Watson said that he had never run across a case of skulking or cowardice, had never had any trouble with his men about discipline and kindred matters and that, in fact, the officers had to hustle to keep up with the privates when it came to an attack.

Private Joseph F. Tinney, son of Mr. Dorothy M. Tinney, of 49 North Sixty-second street, previously reported missing on the official casualty list, has been located in a French hospital, where he is recovering from a slight wound. Tinney is a selective-service man and a member of the 11th Infantry. A brother, James Tinney, is in the chemical warfare corps.

Kelly, of 2428 South Broad street. A brother, Thomas W. Kelly, Jr., was killed in action during the Franco-American counter-attack at the Marne.

Lieutenant Leon Campuzano, a brother of Captain Felix Campuzano, killed in action, was badly wounded and gassed while leading a charge against a German machine-gun nest. The fact that Lieutenant Campuzano had been injured became known through unofficial channels some weeks ago, but his name appeared on the War Department casualty list for the first time today. Though his men were falling fast and all his brother officers had been injured, Lieutenant Campuzano refused to quit but cheered his squad on until their objective had been attained. He is twenty-two years old, the son of Mrs. Emma Campuzano, of 6228 Spruce street, and was a second-year student at the Pennsylvania Military College, Chester, when he enlisted and went to an officers' training camp. He has been cited for bravery and will receive a war cross.

Private Arthur E. Schroener, wounded, had a narrow escape from death, according to a letter to his father, William Schroener, 736 North Thirty-ninth street. "I was out with a working party," he said, "when being seven of us got into a high-explosive shell landed right beside us. Three men were killed and the rest wounded. I quit but cheered my comrades considering everything, and am now on the road to complete recovery."

PATHÉ NEWS

NOT a newspaper, not a magazine —yet it has the largest circulation in the world! Its circulation results from its phenomenal popularity. It now resumes the name under which it became famous—the Pathe News.

It is a motion picture. It has educated more persons to a fondness for the Silent Drama than everything else put together. Eight years ago when the word "movies" was used in contempt the great men of the nation were wont to visit the theatres where it was showing. Through it the uneducated were taught the personalities of the great men of the world; visited the great cities of the earth; by it were broadened, educated; ceased to be provincial and came to know the people of other lands.

Twenty Million Persons See Every Issue. It is shown twice a week in the best motion picture theatres everywhere. Just as it was the first of all motion picture news weeklies, so it always has been, and now is, the best. Twenty-two years of successful picture making are behind it.

Now it promises and will attain an even wider usefulness. You should not miss a single issue. Ask the manager of your favorite theatre the days on which he shows it!
